Dear Sir or Madam

I am a master's student of the Otto-von-Guericke University in Magdeburg. My study program is almost completed and I would like to join a strong team of developers.

I have good knowledge of java enterprise specific tools. The list is quite long and you have already seen it in the CV.

Although Java is my main language till now, I am also highly interested in new languages and technologies. I find Golang very interesting and promising since it is compiled, fast and designed with attention to multithreading. Meanwhile multicore processors are the future of hardware.

I have a bit of experience with microservices and it would be interesting to use this type of architecture.

The DevOps part is also essential part of software engineering and would be interesting to do it as well.

I am also interested not only in software development, but in the future of technologies in general. Especially in AI hardware accelerators, 5G, quantum computing, medicine and energy storages. In other words, I am interested in anything that can move this world forward.

Have a nice day ;)

Kind regards, Konstantin Pinegin
